

A HISTORY OF RIVALS AMID SCENIC SPLendor

One step aboard the Royal Gorge Route and you'll know you've embarked upon one of Colorado's most treasured scenic railroads.

President Roosevelt at the Hanging Bridge

Our history dates back to the 1870s when two competing railroads, the Denver Rio Grande and the Santa Fe, both worked to build tracks through the Royal Gorge to reach the mining riches further west in Leadville. The only problem was that the Royal Gorge was a chasm, so deep, over 1,250 feet in places, and tight, only 30 feet at its narrowest point, that there was room for only one set of tracks. An all-out war broke out between the two, along with a legal battle that raged in the courts for almost two years. An attorney's dream come true!

Both the D&RG and Santa Fe built stone forts in the Gorge, rolled rocks down on the men working on the right of way, and threw their tools in the river as they leapfrogged each other. The Santa Fe hired the legendary "Bat" Masterson to assemble a group of men to defend their interests, and soon picks and shovels were replaced by rifles and pistols.

On March 27, 1880, litigation was finally settled when both railroads signed the Treaty of Boston which gave the D&RG access through the Royal Gorge.

For more than 87 years passengers experienced the breathtaking beauty, wildlife, and romance of the rails until passenger train service ended in 1967. Visitors were left high and dry, with no access through the Royal Gorge.

In 1999 the tracks were purchased from the Union Pacific, allowing visitors from around the world to once again experience not only the Royal Gorge, but classic rail service, dining, and entertainment.

The strict "No Fun" policy has been lifted today!

ROYAL GORGE ROUTE RAILROAD – THE SCENIC LINE OF THE WORLD

All aboard Colorado's finest scenic train that takes you on a journey through the spectacular Royal Gorge. This 2-hour, 24-mile round-trip is a visual and culinary feast, combining scenery, wildlife, history, world-class service, and dining options. You will travel by rail deep beneath the towering 1,000-foot granite cliffs of the Royal Gorge, along the tumbling waters of the Arkansas River, where eagles soar, bighorn sheep roam, and cell service is non-existent.

The Royal Gorge Route is more than just a train ride, it's one of Colorado's most popular destination attractions. Each year, more than 100,000 visitors from around the world join us to experience service aboard our Coach, Vista Dome, Sunshine Falls Bar, Gourmet Lunch, Dinner, Murder Mystery, and Santa Express Trains. Tickets are available at the Santa Fe Depot located at 401 Water Street in Cañon City, Colorado, just 45 minutes south of Colorado Springs and only 2 hours south of Denver. Arrive early to shop in our train and toy store featuring unique Colorado apparel and exclusive railroad collectables.

Royal Gorge Route RAILROAD

YOUR TICKET TO RIDE

Since 1879, the Royal Gorge Route, known as the "Scenic Line of the World," has been ferrying passengers along the tumbling Arkansas River, over 1,000 feet below the rocky granite cliffs of the famed Royal Gorge. This is no ordinary train ride, as chef Jeremy Garnett combines the bright, fresh tastes of Colorado to create award-winning entrées on our Vista Dome, Gourmet Lunch, Dinner, and Murder Mystery Trains.

Each year, more than 100,000 visitors from around the world come to experience the Royal Gorge Route. No wonder Colorado's most scenic and luxurious streamliner was recently named one of America's Top Trains.

To purchase tickets to ride the Royal Gorge Route, visit RoyalGorgeRoute.com or call 1.888.724.5748. For lodging information visit CanonCityColorado.com or stop by the Royal Gorge Welcome Center at 4th and Royal Gorge Blvd. (just north of the train depot), in Cañon City.
